Study disinformation. HOW TO LOSE THE INFORMATION WAR | Tweets: Russia, Ukraine, CEE, tech, democracy, calling out flagrant misogyny

Washington, DC

Beigetreten Jan. 2012

If this hasn't convinced you we need a change, gendered abuse and disinfo is a national security issue. We spoke with ..., and ..., who were targeted by Chinese, Russian, and Iranian state media with gendered disinfo and smear campaigns

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia Folgen

We propose several pages of solutions in the report. Most important: introducing incident reports, allowing targets of abuse to group many pieces of content/campaigns together and giving moderators more context than a single tweet/post, reducing the efficacy of malign creativity.

We also encourage lawmakers to lead by example and end the gendered rhetoric we see some politicians using in Congress and on campaigns. We also hope VAWA will be reauthorized in the new Congress and include provisions to mitigate online abuse.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 3 Min.

Finally, too many employers, from newsrooms to universities to think tanks, do not provide enough support for women who might be exposed to abuse as a result of their work-related public engagement. It's a critical reality of the digital age that has gone largely unacknowledged.

It was as much an honor as it was disturbing to be a part of 's report on gendered abuse online. If you're a female journalist, politician or public figure these findings won't surprise you, but make it very clear the status quo is untenable

Can't say it was a treat to participate in a focus group for this project, given the bile we surfaced. But it certainly was rewarding.

This is an urgent problem. One that silences women and pollutes the healthy discourse on which democracy depends. Stakes really are that high

The biggest challenge in identifying this content both for our team and for platforms is what we've dubbed "malign creativity" — the coded language, memes, and context-based content which allow harmful posts to avoid detection.

1   12   59

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 10 Std
Other challenges:

Platforms lack a coherent definition of "targeted harassment;" as a result, a lot of the abuse women face doesn't violate terms of service and thus requires no action on the platforms' part.

Online harassment & abuse can mean women may be less likely to choose to participate in public life

A new report, "How Gender, Sex & Lies are Weaponized Against Women Online", shows that social media platforms & lawmakers have largely ignored the threat

lol. I already know what the report says. My generation is VERY savvy to propaganda. God Bless you.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia 10 Std

Considering that it's academic research and not propaganda, no, you don't. One of the things we mention is how gendered disinformation knows no political party. Perhaps you might find it more worthwhile than attacking a someone you don't know based on research you didn't read?

Ion_America_First_White @ Mari Orsick 10 Std

All due respect, the concept of "gendered disinformation" emanates from feminist propaganda. Feminism was aimed at me from birth, by the time I was 11, I decided to reject feminism in all its form. Feminists are losing my generation of girls. We just don't want that life

Gendered attacks against women are nothing new, but the research team here led by @wiczipedia shows what typical themes emerge and provides recommendations for platforms, lawmakers, and employers.

It highlights, most importantly, how women of color receive the cruelest attacks.

Vice President Harris and other women in politics aren't targeted with sexualized and gendered abuse because of their "dumb policies."

This abuse is meant to silence women and keep them out of public life.

The report on which the essay is based actually discusses that we detected no difference between Republicans and Democrats in terms of sexualized and gendered abuse. I chose to highlight the most shocking and widespread narratives we found which happened to be targeted at Dems.

Others have done comparative studies: isdglobal.org/isd-publicatio …

We also tracked abuse against Republican women, and as the report lays out, they are not immune.

Finally, the Wilson Center is a nonpartisan think tank. This research was not conducted with a political purpose.

Okay, let's talk about women attacking other women.

Does it happen? Yes. But based on my own experience, it's far less frequent, generally not gendered or sexualized, and far less vitriolic.

Yes, I'm sure there are a few women using anon accounts to send hateful messages, but to discount rampant misogyny by saying "akshually women are mean to each other sometimes too" is missing the entire point.

Keep concentrating on social issues like racism and gender, when class warfare is where it's at. Distractions can be amplified.

We can walk and chew gum. Just because I focus my own research on these issues doesn't mean that economic inequality isn't a problem. I would also argue that they're interconnected- gender and race pay gaps are very real.

For years Twitter and Facebook have been holding world leaders to lower standards than they have you and me when it comes to violating their rules against undermining democracy and calling for violence. They claimed "newsworthiness" put these people in a different category.

05:07 · 29. Jan. 2021

DR. SIVA VAIDHYANATHAN @sivavaid · 54 Sek.

I think they have this exactly backward. It's far less important for Facebook and Twitter to host content from world leaders than it is to host content from the unknown and powerless.

World leaders and leaders of major political movements and parties do not lack for platforms. They are not voiceless. They have state media, quasi-state media (like FOX), and organs of legitimate journalism that are all compelled to carry their messages.

Social media are different. For one thing, they are SOCIAL. So trust and popularity are governed by social interactions and affiliations. Second, they are often personal, intimate. Word comes via people we know, rather than from a formal channel we might doubt or distrust.

Another example of the normalized, engrained misogyny that women in public life have to deal with.

Objectification shouldn't be part of the job for any White House Press Secretary; it's what they say that should matter.

That's clearly unimportant to Brandon.

One consequence of the forced and self-deplatforming we're seeing is a mass exodus to encrypted messengers like Telegram. So far the US has mostly managed to avoid the widespread challenges that countries like Brazil, India, and Ukraine have faced in this vein. No longer.

Telegram is NOT an "encrypted messenger." It supports end-to-end encryption ONLY if it is turned on (not by default) and ONLY for single-user chats, never for groups the way Signal, WhatsApp and iMessage do by default. I can't believe that this myth persists. twitter.com/wiczipedia/sta

For ex Nina notes that a lot of this disinfo and abuse is happening via visual and textual memes. A few years ago I wrote a report about how crucial memes are to running successful influence ops but I certainly didn't think of them in this context.

Kate Hammerberg @kate_hberg · 15 Sek

I've also been on the receiving end of abuse which I'm confident was intended to prevent me from participating in public dialogue. It's scary. It feels awful. And, it creates a profound sense of insecurity re: your personal safety. No one deserves that

Kate Hammerberg @kate_hberg · 15 Sek

But apparently women in the public eye have to take this sh*t in stride, and that should not be the norm. I guess I'm just here to offer my voice to Nina's recommendations in this report.

Thank you to the woman on LinkedIn who gave me this little ray of sunshine.

This, plus the huge positive response to my offer of mentorship has improved an otherwise dumpster fire first day of February 🥲

Nina Jankowicz is such an inspirational scholar.

Why doesn't Twitter auto-paginate tweet threads? Then they could auto-update as you add to a thread, obviating the need for this "1/6" garbage. C'mon, @Twitter. It's this or an edit button, damnit.

exactly, this will ensure full employment for the anti-disinfo industry. Imagine the disinfo that will need to be combatted when you can make a post that says "I love kittens," get 100,000 likes and retweets, then change it to "I love Hitler"

One consequence of the forced and self-deplatforming we're seeing is a mass exodus to encrypted messengers like Telegram. So far the US has mostly managed to avoid the widespread challenges that countries like Brazil, India, and Ukraine have faced in this vein. No longer.

Watched the Axios interview with Zelensky last night & was disappointed they opted to dub over him instead of using subtitles. It's audibly annoying and means some Ukrainians can't see the original interview their president gave. Feels like a lost opportunity for Axios there.

One consequence of the forced and self-deplatforming we're seeing is a mass exodus to encrypted messengers like Telegram. So far the US has mostly managed to avoid the widespread challenges that countries like Brazil, India, and Ukraine have faced in this vein. No longer.

Telegram is NOT an "encrypted messenger." It supports end-to-end encryption ONLY if it is turned on (not by default) and ONLY for single-user chats, never for groups the way Signal, WhatsApp and iMessage do by default. I can't believe that this myth persists. twitter.com/wicz pedia/sta

Can’t believe I need to say this, but:

LEASH LAWS STILL APPLY TO YOU EVEN IF HOU THINK YOUR DOG IS FRIENDLY AND WELL-BEHAVED.

I’ve been encountering a lot of absolutely unapologetic and irresponsible dog owners while hiking lately and it is so discouraging.

...Jake will happily sit and wait for hikers, kids, and other dogs on leash to pass on the trail, but unleashed dogs drive him nuts. I've learned how to mitigate these issues, but he's adopted and this behavior probably will never go away at this juncture. He's still a great dog.

But on two recent hikes, when a black lab dope-ily disobeyed its owner (who was admittedly not trying very hard to control him) and trundled over to Jake, or when we encountered a dog with no owner in sight, I've had two near-emergency situations.

While I'm throwing myself to the ground to try to prevent these strange dogs from approaching Jake (who is remaining chill), these owners are totally unperturbed.

"He's friendly!" they shout.

It doesn't matter. What matters is if your dog is listening to you! And he isn't.

Tl;dr- you don't know when you're going to encounter a dog who doesn't like other dogs, a person/kid who is afraid of dogs, or some sort of predator on the trail. If there are leash rules in the park you're visiting, obey them. It's for your dog's safety and the safety of others.

Jake, a Very Good Boy, does not really like other dogs. He REALLY hates being approached by a dog that's off leash while he's on (this is true for many dogs they feel like they need to protect their owners more when they're attached to them).

While I'm throwing myself to the ground to try to prevent these strange dogs from approaching Jake (who is remaining chill), these owners are totally unperturbed.

"He's friendly!" they shout.

It doesn't matter. What matters is if your dog is listening to you! And he isn't.

1 · 14

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 2 Std

Tl;dr- you don't know when you're going to encounter a dog who doesn't like other dogs, a person/kid who is afraid of dogs, or some sort of predator on the trail. If there are leash rules in the park you're visiting, obey them. It's for your dog's safety and the safety of others.

1 · 3 · 32

If you have eyes on your dog at all times and it has actually PERFECT recall then MAYBE no leash is ok. The only dog I've ever met that is even close to good enough is a springer spaniel in Eng and that does competition hunting. Your fat Labrador? Not a chance he holds a candle.

I watched a possible tragedy unfold today. Woman left her lab puppy off leash so he could "play" with tiny little on leash terrier. Man with little one said nothing. They couldn't get lab back on leash, almost hit by a car. Took 4 people nearly an hr to round him up. Jnrea

I love dogs. But some folks don't, and some dogs don't, all for very good reasons. You know what else doesn't like unleashed dogs? Wildlife. Got into argument this week in Rock Creek Park with people who wouldn't abide by law.

And studies show education has an impact. Eighteen months after the IREX program first began, the organization evaluated participants' skill retention compared with a control group. Participants of the Learn to Discern program were better able to navigate the modern information environment than their peers; they were 28 percent more likely to "demonstrate sophisticated knowledge of the news industry" and "25 percent more likely to self report" cross checking multiple news sources, an important skill given today's fast-paced flow of information.[..] The campaign trained 15,000 individuals directly; those participants shared their new skills with another 90,000 friends, family members, and peers. Although that's a fraction of the country's population of 45 million, the program offers a model that might be replicated more broadly at this particularly critical time. In 2017, the Ukrainian Ministry of Education signed a decree prioritizing media literacy in the national curriculum, and IREX began working with fifty schools across the country to inject the subject into the education system. Rather than create an entirely new subject, the skills are presented in the context of preexisting courses, such as history and language.

I can do nothing about people literally breaking the law because they are selfish and irresponsible, save throwing myself on the ground, which you'll note I've done in both these cases. Neither me or my dog are at fault here. But thanks for your input

Kimberley McLean she/her @skimmley · 14 Std
you could muzzle your dog when you're out in public so that you don't have to live in fear of it attacking other dogs or fling yourself into the path of those other dogs. if you're going to own rescue dogs, you need to figure this stuff out instead of blaming other people

There's actually no need at all for him to be muzzled since nothing happens when people adhere to leash laws! I'm not going to impinge on my dog's quality of life and enjoyment of a hike because some people can't follow the rules. They are firmly in the wrong, not me.

I'm not saying their complaints aren't legitimate, the vaccine shortages and mangled rollouts are a problem in lots of places. I just imagine MoCo (and Arlington, Fairfax, etc.) have a higher-than-usual number of prominent commentators with big megaphones.

I hear you, though I read Anne's commentary as more of an indictment of the US system as a whole. My mom is in NJ and faced similar problems; so have friends' parents across the country. Don't think it was meant to pick on MoCo specifically, but write from personal experience.

One consequence of the forced and self-deplatforming we're seeing is a mass exodus to encrypted messengers like Telegram. So far the US has mostly managed to avoid the widespread challenges that countries like Brazil, India, and Ukraine have faced in this vein. No longer.

I got to read Nicole's highly readable and chilling book earlier this year. With the news of a water treatment facility hack, it couldn't be more prescient or more chilling... and it's out tomorrow:

The Honorable Christopher Wray
Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation

General Paul M. Nakasone
Director, National Security Agency

Mr. Brandon Wales
Acting Director, Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency
Department of Homeland Security
300 7th Street, SW
Washington, DC 20528

Dear Director Haines, General Nakasone, Director Wray, and Acting Director Wales,

We are writing to urge you to name and empower a clear leader in the United States' response to the SolarWinds cyber breach that has affected numerous federal agencies, and thousands of other private sector entities. The federal government's response so far has lacked the leadership and coordination warranted by a significant cyber event, and we have little confidence that we are on the shortest path to recovery.

The briefings we have received convey a disjointed and disorganized response to confronting the breach. Taking a federated rather than a unified approach means that critical tasks that are outside the central roles of your respective agencies are likely to fall through the cracks. The threat our country still faces from this incident needs clear leadership to develop and guide a unified strategy for recovery, in particular a leader who has the authority to coordinate the response, set priorities, and direct resources to where they are needed.

The handling of this incident is too critical for us to continue operating the way we have been. Presidential Policy Directive-41 was not meant to impede a joint response to significant cyber incidents and clearly gives the Unified Coordination Group the authority, with mutual agreement and consistent with applicable legal authorities, to reassign operational control of respective agency assets to respond to such incidents. We urge you to reach such an agreement and assign a clear leader to ensure we confront and mitigate this incident fully and as quickly as possible.

Sincerely,

We're supposed to forget the fact that a mob incited by the former President attempted to disenfranchise the 81 million people by overturning the results of the election, I guess.

They weren't disenfranchised, they lost. That's how elections work, people who vote for the people who did not win had their votes counted & there were less of them than there were for a different candidate. Cast & counted votes by definition aren't from disenfranchised people

I also cannot believe we are talking about #%&@#^% Russia right now. Are you kidding me? Yes, Russia did hack political parties and entities and launch an influence campaign against the United States, a fact which Trump denied for four years. It has nothing to do with Jan 6.

The fact that we just heard the false narrative that "antifa infiltrated the protest on Jan 6" entered into the Congressional record by Trump's team during this impeachment trial is just another example of information laundering. It makes me sick.

Wait, I thought we said Russia was not a threat, and yet Schoen is speaking with (correct) derision about Sputnik, a Russian state-sponsored propaganda outlet. So which is it, Trump team?

For everyone frothing at the mouth about @IuliiaMendel's appointment as @ZelenskyyUa spox, here's a not-hot take:
1. Iuliia was a stringer for NYT and can hardly be held accountable for the editorial direction the paper (incorrectly) chose.

12:21 PM - 3 Jun 2019

15 Retweets 39 Likes

7 15 39

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 3 Jun 2019

2. Zelensky did NOT benefit from the Biden scandal. On the contrary: Giuliani called him and his team "enemies of the President" and the US Ambassador was removed, leaving a hole in US-Ukraine high-level communications at a critical moment.

1 4 13

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 3 Jun 2019

3. I met Iuliia when we were both reporting from Zelensky's hometown in April and I found her smart and level-headed. Frankly, I'm happy that the new administration has a young woman in this role and from my limited interactions with her I think she'll be an asset.

1 3 20

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 3 Jun 2019

Finally, we were all angry at Giuliani et al for using Ukraine as a political football; don't do the same thing. There's nothing nefarious here.

Herrera Beutler Again Confirms Conversation with McCarthy Regarding January 6 U.S. Capitol Attack

In my January 12 statement in support of the article of impeachment, I referenced a conversation House Minority Leader Kevin McCarthy relayed to me that he'd had with President Trump while the January 6 attack was ongoing. Here are the details:

When McCarthy finally reached the president on January 6 and asked him to publicly and forcefully call off the riot, the president initially repeated the falsehood that it was antifa that had breached the Capitol. McCarthy refuted that and told the president that these were Trump supporters. That's when, according to McCarthy, the president said: "Well, Kevin, I guess these people are more upset about the election than you are."

Since I publicly announced my decision to vote for impeachment, I have shared these details in countless conversations with constituents and colleagues, and multiple times through the media and other public forums.

I told it to the Daily News of Longview on January 17. I've shared it with local county Republican executive board members, as well as other constituents who ask me to explain my vote. I shared it with thousands of residents on my telephone town hall on February 8. (See below)

To the patriots who were standing next to the former president as these conversations were happening, or even to the former vice president: if you have something to add here, now would be the time.

And while I'm here- journalists! You need to quote women in your stories: one quote from a woman can lead to speaking opportunities and other recognition for her. I'm tired of seeing the same pale, male, Yale parade of experts you're quoting. Try. Harder.

The spreaders of hate speech & disinformation can do their worst in Australia, it's the real news Mark Zuckerberg is stopping you from sharing. Facebook is protecting profits at the expense of democracy, so we need to stand up for each other in this fight

I recall @seansrussiablog couldn't place Facebook ads on a podcast episode he did on Russian and US foreign policy. Hardly "political advertising" as the term was meant to be used and the restrictions were meant to cover.

This is laughable. As we found in our research on gendered harassment & disinfo, algorithms can't keep up with #MalignCreativity - the use of iterative memes and coded language to avoid automated detection. Even if users turned this filter on, it likely wouldn't do much. Cop out.

We've had a culture that discouraged participation in #AllMalePanels for years, but today we codified that as a policy

Staff that identify as male should avoid participating in all-male-panels in any forum

Suggested wording to event organisers is below

Suggested email wording

"Can you confirm this isn't an all-male panel? It's Moonshot policy not to take part in all-male panels, so if it is we would be happy to suggest a female member of our team instead of X, or to facilitate introductions to other qualified women in the field."

Yes I don't think that is in tension with this view - the thought was you have to do all the things to ensure a good info ecosystem and then in the end it falls to the individual - so certainly generational investment would be warranted

I'm very excited to take on this next challenge, starting ASAP. Of course, it's bittersweet since it also means I'll be closing my chapter as a foreign correspondent in Ukraine after nearly 11 years. I'm writing this from Kyiv, which has been a second home to me since March 2010.

2 · 2 · 31

Christopher Miller @ChristopherJM · 5 t

I never imagined I'd be in Ukraine so long but this country & its people welcomed & rubbed off on me. Nor did I ever think I'd come here & report on a revolution, an annexation, a war, let alone the impeachment of a US president over a phone call with his Ukrainian counterpart.

1 · 2 · 36

Christopher Miller @ChristopherJM · 5 t

I'm so proud of the work I've done in Ukraine, Russia, Belarus & grateful to all who read it. I'm sad I'll be leaving without seeing peace in Donbas & justice for my murdered friend & colleague Pavel Sheremet, among other things, but happy to see Ukraine in better shape overall.

4 · 2 · 72

This doesn't mean the Ukraine tweets will stop. How could they? When I'm able to do so I'll still be pleased to weigh in on Ukraine/Russia etc. And again, my DMs and email are open.

And I'll visit in the future. So this isn't до свидания. It's до скорого.

United States "does not and will never recognize Russia's purported annexation of the peninsula, and we will stand with Ukraine against Russia's aggressive acts" - @POTUS

#Russia #Ukraine

Statement by President Biden on the Anniversary of Russia's Illegal Invasion of Ukraine

Seven years ago today, Russia violated international law, the norms by which modern countries engage one another, and the sovereignty and territorial integrity of its neighbor Ukraine when it invaded Crimea.

The United States continues to stand with Ukraine and its allies and partners today, as it has from the beginning of this conflict. On this somber anniversary, we reaffirm a simple truth: Crimea is Ukraine.

The United States does not and will never recognize Russia's purported annexation of the peninsula, and we will stand with Ukraine against Russia's aggressive acts. We will continue to work to hold Russia accountable for its abuses and aggression in Ukraine. We will also continue to honor the courage and hope of the Revolution of Dignity, in which the Ukrainian people faced down sniper fire and enforcers in riot gear on the Maidan and demanded a new beginning for their country. The United States still believes in the promise of Ukraine and we support all those working towards a peaceful, democratic, and prosperous future for their country.

Right. So no surprise to you I'm sure - those reactions are emotional - drama queens most men are - insecure, fearful, emotionally reactive - men in fear tend to be aggressive - most men threatened by strong smart women and others

Absolutely agree I've seen this a so. However, sometimes I wonder if the reader has some heuristics in which they interpret the response from males and females in different tones. Information and Communication theory rely so much on the receiver

I appreciate your constructive comments and hope you're right! But it's also possible that vaccinated people returning to normal life immediately can build resistant strands. I just think this piece was irresponsibly argued on multiple levels.

Oh, the piece itself was irresponsible and nutty! :D And you're right about resistant strains. My fear is that in messaging only caution, we drive people away from vaccines ... when the truth is that only by vaccinating can we eventually demask and normalize ... eventually. #hope

Incredible reporting showing how fb live was used by political figures (incl. BJP officials) to stoke the deadly Delhi violence last year. Some of the quotes here are horrifying

From The Caravan, an account India ordered Twitter to block last month (Twitter defied the order)

> The Caravan @thecaravanindia
> The videos belie the claim that the Maujpur mob was spontaneous, apolitical, or in support of the CAA. They appealed for Hindus to unite against the anti-CAA protests. The Hindu identity appeared central to their clarion call, to those who answered it. bit.ly/2O4UAXf

One of the most depressing parts of Jan 6 was to see this absurd lie not only reported as truth by a DC newspaper, but then to see it laundered into the Congressional record by Matt Gaetz and other GOP Reps that evening when Congress was back in session.

BREAKING: Biden Administration imposes sanctions on Russian officials for the "attempted assassination" of @navalny, and senior US officials accuse FSB officials "with high confidence" of trying to poison him with the military-made poison Novichok.

06:03 - 2. März 2021

Nick Schifrin @nickschifrin · 25 Sek.

List includes Russia's prosecutor general, Investigative Committee head, National Guard head, prison service head - mirroring European sanctions. (One senior official said an additional name would be added based on Navalny team requests, but we don't know the name yet.)

Nick Schifrin @nickschifrin · 25 Sek.

Overall, senior Administration official called the Russia strategy as "not seeking a reset, nor seeking to escalate." Biden is the first U.S. President since the Cold War ended _not_ to pursue a reset with Russia.

Nick Schifrin @nickschifrin · 25 Sek.

Meanwhile, in Russia, Navalny is being sent to "Penal Colony No. 2"

At the advice of the cousin who gave it to me, I changed the needle and got brand new high quality wire for the speakers. I've switched the inputs (it has two sets), all to no avail.

Does this mean the problem is with the stereo itself? Any more troubleshooting I can do?

Audiophile twitter, please help!

We have a vintage stereo system w/ new turntable we received as a wedding gift that has been acting possessed for a while. Basically one speaker will randomly cut out or not work at all. Sometimes it starts working if we whack it a few times?!

I work for an audio manufacturer and my first thought is that you've got a moving magnet turntable plugged into a moving coil preamp (or vice versa)? Without more details, I cannot really help, but could be a starting point here:

There would have to be a loose connection or faulty chip in the system itself. I would take the cover off and see if you can find anything loose like the speaker jack. Otherwise it's probably not worth fixing.

I think you have received some good diagnostic advice to swap wires to see if the problem stays with one speaker: speaker cable, amp channel, RCA cable channel, phonograph channel, etc. Whatever it is should be repairable - bad pc board solder joint, semiconductor in the amp, etc

Inflation Laboratory @DrGrelka · 19 min

Another common problem with older gear is dirty switches or potentiometers- audio may drop out on one or both channels, but then returns if you adjust the volume, balance, or other control a little, often accompanied by a scratchy noise

A panel of all-male speakers with a female moderator is still a manel. I know some orgs even pay female journos to moderate their manels. I encourage women not to accept invitations to facilitate the voices of male experts. But the burden here is on the organizers. More:

1) The moderator issue: In compiling statistics on women's representation, we excluded women who served as moderators. Why? A few reasons. First, moderators are often drawn from a think tank's own scholars, so moderator numbers reflect hiring more than a think-tank's choices about to whom they offer their public platforms. Interestingly enough, moderator numbers show a higher proportion of women than speaker numbers. This may reflect that think tank scholars are more diverse than think tank speakers — a notable finding if true — but might also reflect that think tanks often put together an all-male panel and then seek a female moderator to "compensate." Anecdotally, women experts report being asked to moderate all-male events...

It doesn't correct for all the misogyny over the years. ("2 wrongs," etc). It over-corrects and generates new problems for now and the future. In such cases it's implied a whole gender is not worth hearing from.

Glad to see this emphasis on information hygiene from Ukraine's President. Hope to see more concerted efforts across the country redoubling what already exists in the country.

> Володимир Зеленський @ZelenskyyUa

Less bullish about this effort, however. Centers like this tend to be interpreted as a panacea to a tough problem that requires a whole of government, whole of society effort. Hope I'm proven wrong on this one!

In a @EmbaixadaEUA webinar with inspiring women journalists from Brazil yesterday, we described this as a form of violence.

I noted: just like I deserve to feel safe walking home at night the way a man does, I deserve to feel safe expressing my opinion online the way men do.

The amount of loss, death, grief we've all had to endure this past year has been unimaginable. I've lost people I cared about deeply, among other tragedies.

Barraging someone in that fragile state w/ messages like this for months as part of a vicious harassment campaign is sick

I hope you, your family and everyone you know are dragged out by Antifa into the street and douse in gasoline and lit on fire.

I hope you cry yourself to sleep every night. I hope you take your own life. I hope you live all of your days in fear.

You are the scum of the earth....why are you still breathing? Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Kill yourself. Just die cunt .....die by your own hand. Die.

It's absolutely unacceptable.

Reminder that over 90% of the deep fakes that exist today are nonconsensual deep fake pornography targeting women.

If you want to solve the problem of deep fakes in foreign influence campaigns, you can start by protecting women from being objectified.

Good morning! Lots of men among my followers were giving me suggestions about how to deal with online misogynists in responses to this thread yesterday.

Here are a few reasons why it's not particularly helpful or constructive.

> Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia
> Another example of the normalized, engrained misogyny that women in public life have to deal with

1. If you're a man telling a woman how to deal with online misogyny: nope. Just stop. You may as well be giving me tampon advice. Intellectually, you may think you understand what online (or real life) harassment is, but you can't understand the effect it has on the target.

Good morning! Lots of men among my followers were giving me suggestions about how to deal with online misogynists in responses to this thread yesterday.

Here are a few reasons why it's not particularly helpful or constructive.

1. If you're a man telling a woman how to deal with online misogyny: nope. Just stop. You may as well be giving me tampon advice. Intellectually, you may think you understand what online (or real life) harassment is, but you can't understand the effect it has on the target.

Conspiracy theories denying Sarah Everard ever existed and that this is all part of an elaborate plot are being shared on Telegram.

You couldn't get much lower.

This is just some of the misogynistic abuse in this channel - and shared across social media.

Another example of the normalized, engrained misogyny that women in public life have to deal with.

Objectification shouldn't be part of the job for any White House Press Secretary; it's what they say that should matter.

That's clearly unimportant to Brandon.

The notion that women should be thankful to be safe while expressing their democratic rights is not surprising- after all, governments allow them to be harassed, abused, raped, and murdered with little consequence.

It's not a surprising, but it is abhorrent. #March4Justice

Hey are you ok with someone using your email service to send death threats like this ?

Why has metoosociology@gmail.com been allowed to use this account to threaten people? (not just me)

@DRJessieNYC @JessieNYC

I get the weirdest hate mail.

A year ago today: morning in Wales at the end of my last work trip. I knew this would be the last "normal" day for a long while.

I wore a mask on the flight home; no one collected my contact tracing form.

Today, my mom got her second shot of the COVID vaccine. ❤️

IC has a high degree of confidence that the Kremlin used proxies to push influence narratives, including misleading or unsubstantiated claims about President Biden, to US media, officials, and influencers, some close to President Trump.

A clear nod to the alleged Hunter laptop.

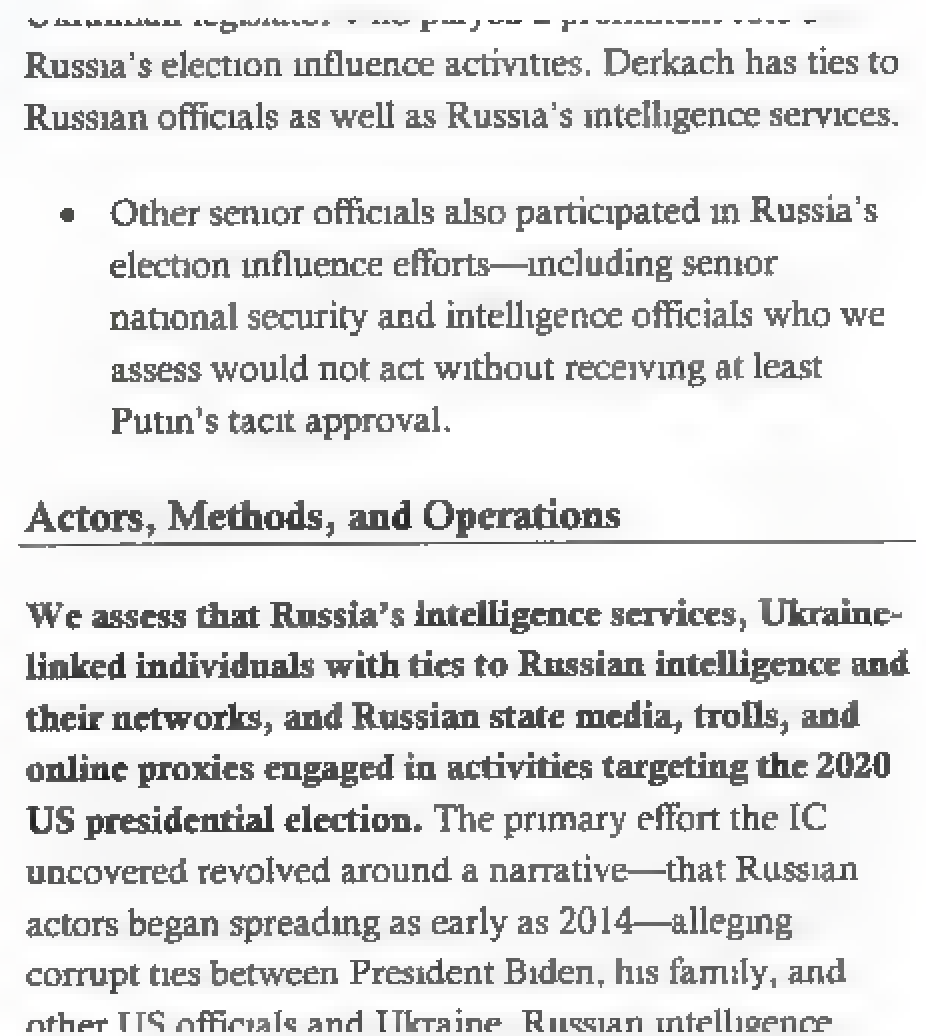
Key info on Ukrainian MP Andriy Derkach, who report alleges is "under Putin's purview"



Russia's election influence activities. Derkach has ties to Russian officials as well as Russia's intelligence services.

- Other senior officials also participated in Russia's election influence efforts—including senior national security and intelligence officials who we assess would not act without receiving at least Putin's tacit approval.

Actors, Methods, and Operations

We assess that Russia's intelligence services, Ukraine-linked individuals with ties to Russian intelligence and their networks, and Russian state media, trolls, and online proxies engaged in activities targeting the 2020 US presidential election. The primary effort the IC uncovered revolved around a narrative—that Russian actors began spreading as early as 2014—alleging corrupt ties between President Biden, his family, and other US officials and Ukraine. Really interesting research from NATO's StratCom COE and @RieffEmbassy. Not surprised to see that most of the identified hate speech toward women politicians is from real people, not bots; this is a problem of systemic misogyny Disappointed, however, to hear tired tropes from one expert such as "women are shy" and "women react differently to abuse than men." How about rather than emphasizing how women react to vile behavior, we denormalize the vile behavior?

Päivi Tampere, Head Of Communications, Finnish Prime Ministers Office, is emphasizing exactly the right thing - the effect abuse on women's participation in democracy. How do we ensure that women feel safer to participate in public life?

Ugh, this is so frustrating.

Some good ideas here but vague language ("restrictions getting more severe as they accrue more violations", penalties when a "substantial number" [what is that?] of members violate rules) is too opaque & misses an op to shape user behavior

Groups are a known problem and a strikes system is a good idea, but w/o details it becomes a "just trust us, we're defo punishing repeat violators or groups w/ uhh a substantial amt of bad stuff" and diminishes the deterrence and educational effects for users

2 · 1 · 10

Jeff Horwitz @JeffHorwitz · 7m

Yeah, the line is always that they don't want to reveal their rules so people can game them. Which is dubious when it comes to policies like "after your second strike, distribution gets reduced by 50%."

Sadly Rana's horrifying story is all too common, as I note in the several examples of similar campaigns I describe.

In the context of this piece/my tweet I'm discussing foreign campaigns used as tools of political influence abroad.

I have a sinking suspicion the first widely successful foreign influence campaign using a deep fake will be sexual and will target a woman.

Most people are too willing to believe the narrative of the wayward woman.

Understood. FWIW - deepfake detection tools are also rapidly being built, social media networks are becoming more alert and aware - as are national agencies. I suspect more likely than not - any plots will be neutralised fairly immediately.

Agree with Nina's analysis here. By ignoring real uses of deepfakes against women we're making the same mistakes the US made in 2015 -- ignoring a real & present threat that'll eventually boil over.

It's been interesting seeing the discussion of the lotus flower as a shorthand for how Asian women r fetishized (those complaints r valid) as someone from a family and province that also sort of consumes and values the lotus root the roots of the lotus are not good looking. they grow in damp, muddy soil and are not visible unless dug up. and yet they are there to get people through difficult winters, stewed in broth with ribs and daikon

In a single Slack, people are beholden to some sort of social or economic push to behave; if a person who has access to me behaves badly prior to this feature, even without blocks, I have recourse. This throws that right out the window

How does one go about effectively mitigating and/or eliminating online abuse?

Removing the ability to be anonymous/requiring everyone to be verified is the only thing that comes to mind, so that people are at least accountable for what they say.

Let me get this straight- not only has Facebook not cracked down on militia content, they're holding space for these groups and directing already radicalized folks to them?! Inexcusable.

I'm glad they're changing this, but the questions companies should ask before rolling out any new feature to millions of people are:

-what's the worst possible use for this feature?
-how might women and POC be targeted with it?

David Pierce @pierce
Update: I asked Slack what it made of all the worries about bullying and harassment made possible by Connect DMs (I should have pushed harder on this sooner, too.) The company is making changes, starting with removing the customized messages.

The online abuse that women endure has been weaponized by foreign adversaries seeking to influence and polarize us. We cannot allow these campaigns to continue; women's participation in our representative democracy is at stake.

Nina's op-ed shows those seeking to silence strong women have used deep fakes w/impunity in America & worldwide. Not only have we lost countless brilliant women's and girls' voices in these attacks, they are a clear & present danger to our national security. This is unacceptable!

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia

On this issue of paramount importance to our national security, to our democracy, for once, let's listen to women. Keep us at the core of the challenge. Let us lead.

we suggest platforms [illegible] allowing users to create and update broader incident reports [illegible] highlight the harassment they are subjected to from a more holistic perspective. [illegible] reports might allow users to add multiple pieces or streams of content from multiple accounts over time, documenting not just a single [illegible] with network visualization and analysis similar to the type done in this report to understand the origins and [illegible] behind waves of abuse. Finally, platforms should ensure that users have a way to follow, escalate, and appeal the status of incident reports. While this feature would be difficult to immediately [illegible] scale, platforms could consider allowing verified users [illegible] access to such features, with the goal of widespread distribution [illegible] given that many women without large audiences [illegible] also subject to abuse. As a final benefit, [illegible] for network analysis would indicate that platforms are [illegible] to create a historical record of abuse against women.

Good morning! Lots of men among my followers were giving me suggestions about how to deal with online misogynists in responses to this thread yesterday.

Here are a few reasons why it's not particularly helpful or constructive.

> Nina Jankowicz @w cz pedia
> Another example of the normalized, engrained misogyny that women in public life have to deal with
> Objectification shouldn't be part of the job for any

1 If you're a man telling a woman how to deal with online misogyny: nope. Just stop. You may as well be giving me tampon advice. Intellectually, you may think you understand what online (or real life) harassment is, but you can't understand the effect it has on the target

2 24 275

Nina Jankowicz @w cz pedia 24 [illegible]

2 It's highly personal, everyone deals with this differently. Not every target will choose to react the same way. Responses can range from righteous indignation to disengagement to direct response to trolls, and that's the target's choice, not

Question for the # ... community ... I'm starting to see more and more confusion in conversations about disinfo, influence, and soft power

What are your thoughts on how we distinguish soft power from malign influence from statecraft?

Vastauksena käyttäjille ...

A big distinction for me is the overt/covert line. IRA pretending to be Americans = clearly malign. Local reporters openly working for USAGM outlets, reporting the truth / civil society support programs clearly funded by USG = soft power.

I've been weighing whether to share this, but it feels critical given the past days' news:

The worst online harassment I've endured was instigated by a man who works with Gaetz. This behavior isn't isolated. It normalizes the dehumanization of women and has no place in Congress.

> Charlie Sykes @SykesCharlie
> "Sources said Gaetz was part of a group of young male lawmakers who created a "game" to score their female sexual conquests, which granted "points" for various targets such as interns, staffers or other female colleagues"

Why not name the harassers and 'redact' yourself? Through media or a third party.
These people need to be named somehow while preventing further harassment for you et al

For those shocked, it's not a secret- I talked about it openly at the time. This man has led harassment campaigns against many other women too. It isn't just him- this behavior has become commonplace. The only scandal is that it's not a scandal.

And White House readout of the call: "Biden affirmed the United States' unwavering support for Ukraine's sovereignty and territorial integrity in the face of Russia's ongoing aggression in the Donbas and Crimea."

President Joseph R. Biden, Jr. spoke today to President Volodymyr Zelenskyy of Ukraine. President Biden affirmed the United States' unwavering support for Ukraine's sovereignty and territorial integrity in the face of Russia's ongoing aggression in the Donbas and Crimea. He emphasized his administration's commitment to revitalize our strategic partnership in support of President Zelenskyy's plan to tackle corruption and implement a reform agenda based on our shared democratic values that delivers justice, security, and prosperity to the people of Ukraine. The leaders agreed these reforms are central to Ukraine's Euro-Atlantic aspirations. They also discussed the importance of close United States-Ukraine cooperation to contain the COVID-19 pandemic and strengthen democracy in the region.

Another example of the normalized, engrained misogyny that women in public life have to deal with.

Objectification shouldn't be part of the job for any White House Press Secretary; it's what they say that should matter.

That's clearly unimportant to Brandon.

Confirmed by Facebook. These 2 breaches in 2019 were indeed separate. So there was one in April that led to 500m users data exposed and another in September (the one we are all taking about now) which was initially 400m users.

> Joe Tidy @joetidy

Russian forces continue to gather in Crimea and elsewhere near Ukraine's borders, but fairly slowly. My sense looking at this situation is that nothing is necessarily going to happen right now, but if they have offensive operations in mind, they are more likely mid-late April. 2/

This buildup looks quite different from 2014, but that's irrelevant. The Russian military is in a different place in terms of capability, force posture, readiness, etc. The political context is different as well. So, we should not fight the last war in analysis. 3/
7 · 16 · 94

Michael Kofman @KofmanMichael · 2h
Quite likely there will be escalating fighting in Donbas, artillery duels, skirmishes, etc. However, the force gathering in Crimea is quite concerning. More units appear to be departing for the peninsula each day. So this situation is developing.

Does this mean invasion imminent? No. I'm largely where I was last week in that initial analysis. But confidence levels are important. I'm less confident that this is just a coercive demonstration than I was before.

They have probably thought about capturing the east and south, cutting Ukraine off from Black Sea, and securing water supply for Crimea.

Ukraine would definitely be a tougher nut to crack.

Could Ukraine withstand simultaneous attacks all along its NE, E, S, and Crimean border?

Zel is under pressure to do something but knows Putin won't let Donbass fall, so launching an offensive that is quickly defeated but results in Iran-level sanctions works for him. Russia is put under significant additional economic strain and pressure on him is relieved 1/

A weak version of the law did finally pass & was strengthened somewhat in 2019, but Florida's law is still limited to perpetrators who act "with the intent of causing substantial emotional distress" even though 79% of perpetrators act with other motives (greed, voyeurism, etc)

Good morning! Lots of men among my followers were giving me suggestions about how to deal with online misogynists in responses to this thread yesterday.

Here are a few reasons why it's not particularly helpful or constructive.

1. If you're a man telling a woman how to deal with online misogyny: nope. Just stop. You may as well be giving me tampon advice. Intellectually, you may think you understand what online (or real life) harassment is, but you can't understand the effect it has on the target

2 24 275

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 24 Jan

2. It's highly personal, everyone deals with this differently. Not every target will choose to react the same way. Responses can range from righteous indignation to disengagement to direct response to trolls, and that's the target's choice, not

In short: Kennan replaced its Ukraine director, a respected scholar, w/ another respected scholar critical of nationalism, including some Ukrainian policies. That angered supporters of the policies.

The controversy's result? Kennan closed it's Kyiv office. Not a win for Ukraine

In reporting the story, I heard and read a lot of highly politicized, unsubstantiated claims about the new Ukraine director, Matthew Rojansky, and Kennan. I quoted very few of them because they weren't backed by much evidence.

Rojansky is one of the top US experts on Russia, and you have a right to agree or disagree w/ his his views.

But I'm not thrilled to see this little old 2018 domestic scandal in #Ukraine regurgitated w/o context in reporting on his NSC nomination. It's not worth your attention.

Did I miss something? Is there a reason we've started to trust reports filed by Paul Manafort, a man who made a career out of lying and swindling?

His claims — especially ones made to appease his clients! — have no merit whatsoever

> Betsy Woodruff Swan @woodruffbets
> Axios: The Biden admin is considering Matthew Rojansky for a top Russia post. Paul Manafort once wrote that Rojansky wrote an article on Ukraine at his direction

2 · 57 · 162

dean garg @dean_garg · 21 min

Rojansky, a Russia-Ukraine scholar, works for the Wilson center, which is non-partisan. Manafort wanted to use something R wrote and claimed that he was in coordination with R, which was disputed by the center

I am a fellow at the Wilson Center- my question was rhetorical. Never in my 3+ years affiliated with the Center has anyone ever suggested to me what to write, say, or think. These claims are ludicrous.

A good summary on the Russian troop buildup on Ukraine's border from @edwardlucas.

One quick clarification though- Ukraine can use some of the US-bought Javelins if Russia should become more aggressive:

> Christopher Miller @ChristopherJM
> A couple things here to clarify. There ARE international observers across the entire country of Ukraine including near Crimea. And Ukraine CAN use Javelins when it wants now. 1st shipment came with strings (only to be used in case of all-out invasion). 2nd didn't; can be used.

White House makes nominations of Inglis and Easterly official w/ statements from Sullivan + Neuberger:

"We are determined to protect America's networks and to meet the growing challenge posed by our adversaries in cyberspace— and this is the team to do it," @jakejsullivan says.

National Security Advisor Jake Sullivan

Today, President Biden took another important step forward in strengthening our nation's cyber capability. He will announce his intent to nominate Chris Inglis as National Cyber Director and Jen Easterly as the Director of the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Agency. If confirmed, Chris and Jen will add deep expertise, experience and leadership to our world-class cyber team, which includes the first-ever Deputy National Security Advisor for Cyber and Emerging Technology Anne Neuberger, as well as strong, crisis-tested professionals from the FBI to ODNI to the Department of Homeland Security to U.S. Cyber Command and the National Security Agency. I'm proud of what we are building across the U.S. government when it comes to cyber. We are determined to protect America's networks and to meet the growing challenge posed by our adversaries in cyberspace — and this is the team to do it.

Deputy National Security Advisor for Cyber and Emerging Technology

I am looking forward to working with Chris and Jen to continue building back better to modernize our cyber defenses and enhance the nation's ability to prevent and respond effectively to cybersecurity incidents. We will work closely with cybersecurity leaders across the United States Government, the private sector, Congress, and dedicated frontline cyber responders to keep our networks safe and secure.

This is a very big escalation of the remit of the Oversight Board, to become a policy and moderation backstop. Why is it happening? One could speculate it is because the future of Facebook moderation is in fact arbitrary editorial decisions for high profile cases

Oversight Board @OversightBoard
From today, users can appeal content to the Oversight Board which they want removed from Facebook and Instagram. The Board will use its independent judgment to make binding decisions on what to leave up and what to take down. oversightboard.com/news/267806285

This is consistent with what is happening within Facebook generally. Policies cannot possibly scale one set of rules for moderation – it doesn't work. So it has to do what it always said it would not which is respond on a case by case basis to hot issues.

emily bell @emilybell · 28 s
This is what a news driven media company does, and this is what Facebook is. Zuckerberg cannot do this himself, nor can his board of directors and senior executives. Their job is to run a giant advertising company. So the Oversight Board becomes in fact a default editorial board

Russia's military buildup on Ukraine's borders is classic Putin: Act unpredictably, let Kremlin officials off the leash, grab the world's attention—then, enter Putin. His state of nation address is April 21. The audience is listening.

A Facebook content moderator contracted through Accenture in Austin quit this morning with a blistering internal note. I've typed it out in full so people can read it for themselves.

this opportunity to share a few thoughts that have been bouncing around my head for most of that time. Most of these concern the mental health challenges that content analysts face, but I've also reflected somewhat on the ways that the current system handicaps Facebook itself. This is a job that's impossible not to take home with you. It is common to experience fatigue, weight changes, and intrusive thoughts, and I've heard stories from people on child exploitation queues who started seeing every adult with a child as a potential predator. I know people who went on psychiatric medication for the first time while working as a content analyst

One action that will not be tied to the sanctions is Russia's reported effort to put bounties on the heads of US troops in Afghanistan. The intel community had low-moderate confidence in the assessment – insufficient to justify sanctions, officials said.

The Kremlin is banking on the idea that, having just imposed sanctions, Washington and Brussels won't have the appetite for a robust response. They may be right.

Sam Greene @samagreene 24 s

I'm not here to say that more sanctions are the right response to this. But there are some very brave people in Russia who deserve to know that they're not alone.

Here's a question that is maybe more metaphysical than anything: would you be breaking Twitter's terms of service if you posted personal information (more or less, doxxing) of a false persona, such as a GRU (or let's say CIA) officer's fake passport they travelled under?

7 3 15

Aric Toler @AricToler · 5m

So, let's say I posted a passport scan, full travel history, and address/vehicle registration for an identity that was clearly fake -- is this doxxing / against Twitter's ToS? Would their moderators actually care if they're real or not, if my tweets get enough abuse reports?

I think the crux is in your last question- if it made it in front of a human moderator with the right context and subject matter expertise, my sense is it'd be allowed to stay. Unfortunately, humanity, context, and SME are in short supply :-/

Lots of revelations in this report. One important detail: Facebook is tracking militia and hate group networks on its platform — including the Proud Boys — and not kicking them off.

I was so glad to have this important conversation about disinformation and gendered harassment with @Alyssa_Milano. These trends aren't just exhausting- they're keeping women from participating in public discourse.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Why would they do this? Because, as @AVindman said, "here, right matters."

It took mine a few years to really get going! You could try pruning it a little in late spring which might give it a litte bit of a boost next year. Other than that, you could maybe move it to a sunnier location, which is probably more trouble than its worth.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Many questions about what to do if you see this sort of disruption on Election Day.
1. Inform a poll worker- they will have resources to call
2. Call Protect the Vote or another nonpartisan election protection organization protectthevote.net

Yeah, I went back and forth with them for months. They gave me a discount for a while but that has since expired and the support folks basically threw up their hands and said "sorry, we can't fix it..." (I also hate their invoicing system, so just do mine manually)

Needless to say, the next spring, the weed tree came back with a vengeance. The poison ivy got more ropey. And adding insult to injury, the sad little evergreen shrubs they put in got a bag worm infestation. (Do yourself a favor and don't look up what bag worms are before bed 🤢)

We're going to be paying a lot of attention to what the Oversight Board decides tomorrow, and autocrats around the world will be especially interested.

But we should be clear that the networks that gave rise to Trump & allowed January 6 to happen are much broader than one man.

The systemic issues that got us to this point—such as the monetization of attention and emotion and the use of psychographic targeting in political ads—aren't going to evaporate because the 45th president can no longer post on Facebook.

Disinfo may not get as easy a lift from him, but will still exist. We need more systemic fixes to the problems we're facing, otherwise we're going to keep playing whack-a-troll with every major informational crisis we encounter. It's not sustainable or scalable. It's dangerous.

I don't know if I'm the first to get around to commenting on it, but one of the "posts" on Donald's new website is an attempt to co-opt the definition of the Big Lie, a phrase often used to describe his false voter fraud claims.

Whoops, I broke her tweet:

Kate Starbird @katestarbird

In an unsurprising rhetorical trick, former Pres Trump suggests switching-confusing the meaning of "the big lie" from its current use (characterizing his disinfo campaign to undermine trust on the election) to the false claims of that same campaign. Like his "fake news" trick.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Before Facebook's Oversight Board determines whether Donald Trump can post on its platform tomorrow at 9 a.m., I just want to remind everyone that their decision is not the law.

Facebook asked people to do some content moderation, and those people said yes. That's it.

You can dress this up in whatever veneer of credibility you want, but the Facebook Oversight Board is a collection of people who got asked to make rules for one website and were paid for it. Their decisions have as much industry-wide impact and credibility as the public lends it.

Ben Collins @oneunderscore 14h

We can also debate the merits of who the people on Facebook's Oversight Board are. The most prominent American disinformation researchers are not on it. Facebook disputes this, but it's true.

Even if they were, they're not a court. They're a private company's paid-for panel.

Facebook Oversight Board upholds ban, dings Facebook for punting the question to the OB:

oversightboard.com/decision/FB-69…

Case summary

The Board has upheld Facebook's decision on January 7, 2021, to restrict then-President Donald Trump's access to posting content on his Facebook page and Instagram account.

However, it was not appropriate for Facebook to impose the indeterminate and standardless penalty of indefinite suspension. Facebook's normal penalties include removing the violating content, imposing a time-bound period of suspension, or permanently disabling the page and account.

The Board insists that Facebook review this matter to determine and justify a proportionate response that is consistent with the rules that are applied to other users of its platform. Facebook must complete its review of this matter within six months of the date of this decision. The Board also made policy recommendations for Facebook to implement in developing clear, necessary, and proportionate policies that promote public safety and respect freedom of expression.

The OB also emphasizes how Facebook's rules are opaque and not enforced evenly across users. Critically, it noted that:
-political leaders aren't the only users who can encourage harm
-heads of state and other officials "can have a greater power to cause harm than other people."

The Board found that former President Trump's posts "severely violated" Facebook's Community Standards:

The Board found that the two posts by Mr. Trump on January 6 severely violated Facebook's Community Standards and Instagram's Community Guidelines. "We love you. You're very special" in the first post and "great patriots" and "remember this day forever" in the second post violated Facebook's rules prohibiting praise or support of people engaged in violence.

In applying a vague, standardless penalty and then referring this case to the Board to resolve, Facebook seeks to avoid its responsibilities. The Board declines Facebook's request and insists that Facebook apply and justify a defined penalty.

The OB also emphasizes how Facebook's rules are opaque and not enforced evenly across users. Critically, it noted that:

-political leaders aren't the only users who can encourage harm

-heads of state and other officials "can have a greater power to cause harm than other people."

These are important points that will impact Facebook's decisions in the future. How will they deal with the Modis, Putins, Maduros, and Dutertes of the world? The OB says Facebook has a duty to take measures to protect against imminent harm, including potential account deletion.

The OB also underlines that Facebook needs "adequate resourcing and expertise to assess risks of harm from influential accounts globally."

This means (IMO) more local subject matter, cultural, linguistic experts, in which that Facebook has been notoriously underinvested.

Despite the double punt (Facebook to Board, Board to Facebook), if Facebook is actually going to implement the Board's recommendations, that will be a net good. If they ignore them (as they have a right to do, the Board's recs aren't binding)... then we're back where we started.

Whoa. FB Oversight Board calls for a "comprehensive review" of Facebook's role in Jan 6th.

- Undertake a comprehensive review of Facebook's potential contribution to the narrative of electoral fraud and the exacerbated tensions that culminated in the violence in the United States on January 6. This should be an open reflection on the design and policy choices that Facebook has made that may allow its platform to be abused.

It has always been pretty clear that the OB shouldn't be a stand-in for a regulatory body, and even though there are some encouraging parts to this decision, it remains that the OB is a highly imperfect Facebook-paid entity.

There are going to be displeased people across the spectrum today... and that speaks to the need for an independent regulatory mechanism with an appeals process that makes legally binding decisions.

To me, this is one of the most important paragraphis in the decision. Facebook refused to provide evidence to its Oversight Board about the role Facebook itself played in facilitating the events that led to January 6th, and the company's response. oversightboard.com/decision/FB-69…

In this case, the Board asked Facebook 46 questions, and Facebook declined to answer seven entirely, and two partially. The questions that Facebook did not answer included questions about how Facebook's news feed and other features impacted the visibility of Mr. Trump's content, whether Facebook has researched, or plans to research, those design decisions in relation to the events of January 6, 2021, and information about violating content from followers of Mr. Trump's accounts. The Board also asked questions related to the suspension of other political figures and removal of other content, whether Facebook had been contacted by political officeholders or their staff about the suspension of Mr. Trump's accounts, and whether account suspension or deletion impacts the ability of advertisers to target the accounts of followers. Facebook stated that this information was not reasonably required for decision-making in accordance with the intent of the Charter; was not technically feasible to provide; was covered by attorney/client privilege; and/or could not or should not be provided because of legal, privacy, safety, or data protection concerns.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Homo digitalis is the hyper-empowered, networked individual (you and me). Pretty much everyone is now connected almost permanently to a small computer (their phone) & it's changing everything. George Floyd has reordered race relations in the US. Why? B/c of homo digitalis.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Many questions about what to do if you see this sort of disruption on Election Day.

1. Inform a poll worker- they will have resources to call
2. Call Protect the Vote or another nonpartisan election protection organization

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the most popular Belarusian news sites, @tutby, has been blocked and its employees arrested, homes raided. It is unacceptable, but Belarusians (who have been protesting since last August!) will find ways to get the truth out.

I know this is not a revelation, but with everything that social media platforms know about me, you'd think they'd also know my dad died almost 11 years ago and I do not need to purchase him a whisky tumbler set or any other gift for Father's Day...

Other painful reminders that users get: baby ads after miscarriages, wedding ads after breakups...

Just another reminder these platforms aren't built with humanity or democracy in mind. Only profit.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

We have an interesting front/back yard split. Tons in front, none in back, where lawn has been done and redone and various patios put in/ripped out since the house has existed! Also saw lots of cicada parts on the sidewalk while walking the dog today...

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

Many questions about what to do if you see this sort of disruption on Election Day.
1. Inform a poll worker- they will have resources to call
2. Call Protect the Vote or another nonpartisan election protection organization

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

Many questions about what to do if you see this sort of disruption on Election Day.

1. Inform a poll worker- they will have resources to call

2. Call Protect the Vote or another nonpartisan election protection organization

Hi. Multiple time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply go and do. It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

Many questions about what to do if you see this sort of disruption on Election Day.
1. Inform a poll worker- they will have resources to call
2. Call Protect the Vote or another nonpartisan election protection organization

Election observation is not something anyone can simply go and do. It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

Well, this was a lovely little piece of mail to receive. Thank you @ArmyWarCollege for the Landpower and Contemporary Strategy Award; it's an honor!

You can read 'Enduring Information Vigiliance' here: press.armywarcollege.edu/parameters/vol...

U.S. ARMY WAR COLLEGE

May 7, 2021

Dear Ms. Jankowicz,

Congratulations. Your article, "Enduring Information Vigilance: Government after COVID-19," which appeared in the Autumn 2020 issue of Parameters, has been selected as the first-place recipient of the 2020 Landpower and Contemporary Strategy Award. The award recognizes the most significant contributions to our professional knowledge of Landpower and/or contemporary strategy published in the U.S. Army War College Quarterly, Parameters, during a given volume year.

Your excellent article clearly contributed to the defense community's understanding of new challenges in today's strategic environment and enhanced the reputation of the U.S. Army War College as a leading center for contemporary strategic thinking. Your recommendations will help the U.S. defense community develop better ways to counter the political warfare of our adversaries.

Thank you for contributing to the U.S. Army War College's mission of educating and developing strategic leaders.

Strength and Wisdom.

Sincerely,

Raise your hand if you're in favor of a big ol' THIS IS ILLEGAL label on posts that encourage unaccredited "observers" to show up at polling stations

Many questions about what to do if you see this sort of disruption on Election Day.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Elect on observation is not someth ng anyone can s.mply go and do. t requ res training. It requ res restraint. The fact that the President s encourag.ng his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potent ally violence.

One of the things we look for when we are vis ting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to ag tate for one party or another. Th s s an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

if he gets the treatment Amnesty gave Navalny, it might be better if you said nothing.

One idea from Poland's Sikorsky: ban Belarusian flag carrier from EU airspace until Protasevich is released.

> Commissioner, I expect you to ban @Belavia_by from European airspace until Mr Raman Protasevich is released. The Belorussian MIG-29 threatened European citizens with murder in order to illegally seize an EU-protected political refugee.

That'll "help" so many Belarusian families in Europe especially when Belarusian authorities heavily limited traffic on ground borders

Important point. wasn't endorsing per se, but few folks discussing concrete measures today so wanted to highlight.

Important for @Ryanair to release any recordings of what was said by Belarus air traffic control and the fighter jet pilots. Were threats of force used to make the plane land? Also need to hear from the pilot.

Please, would you mind landing? The left arrow does not work properly and proceeding would be against your own safety...

What is the pilot that would land in Belarus without a serious threat? Come on...
